

Colorado State University

Statement

November 5, 2008

Colorado State University is in a great position to build on its strengths. I appreciate the confidence of the Board of Governors to lead this great institution as interim president.

The welfare of CSU's academics and research is and always has been my number one priority. As interim, I'll look forward to working closely with faculty, students, and staff as well as alumni, donors and supporters of CSU in an open and transparent manner. During this transition time, it's imperative for the university to maintain its positive momentum and its focus on excellence. The 21st century land grant university commitment of access to a world-class education, research and service to society is alive and thriving at Colorado State.

Tony Frank, Senior Executive Vice President and Provost
